

Lift

"Be strong and very courageous." Joshua 1:7

During our tour of an aircraft carrier, a jet fighter pilot explained that planes need a 56-kilometer-per-hour wind to take off on such a short runway. To reach this steady breeze, the captain turns his ship into the wind. "Shouldn't the wind come from the plane's back?" I asked. The pilot answered, "No. The jets must fly into the wind. That's the only way to achieve lift."

God called Joshua to lead His people into the "winds" that awaited them in the promised land. Joshua required two things. Internally, he needed to "be strong and very courageous" (Joshua 1:7); and externally, he needed challenges. This included the daily task of leading thousands of Israelites, facing walled cities (6:1–5), demoralizing defeats (7:3–5), Achan's theft (vv. 16–26), and continual battles (chs. 10–11).

The wind that blew in Joshua's face would lift his life as long as his thrust came from God's instructions. God said he must "be careful to obey all the law . . . do not turn from it to the right or to the left . . . meditate on it day and night, so that you may be careful to do everything written in it. Then you will be prosperous and successful" (1:7–8).

Are you resolved to follow God's ways, no matter what? Then look for challenges. Fly boldly into the wind and see your spirit soar.
